

Claiming The Undefined

Anna Thalmann, Loïc Flamma, Andrea Blanch Stampa
Public Space Behaviorology FS24
Chair of Architectural Behaviorology

This field was hit by a storm a few years ago, leaving the trees severely damaged. Their weakened state was then aggravated by a beetle infection. Now only tree stumps are left, and unobstructed sunlight can now flood the place and initiate the phase of rejuvenation, fostering the growth of new trees. Now the place feels very open but still sheltered by the trees around the area making it a very inviting and flexible space for different user groups as show the informal fireplace and pathway.

